VoIP System Options

VoIP (Voice over Internet Protocol) phone systems have become increasingly popular in recent years, as they offer a number of benefits over traditional landline phone systems. VoIP systems are not tied to a specific location, can be easily scaled and can be equipped with an arsenal of features to make your business run more efficiently.

Customise your VoIP System to suit your businesses needs.

IVR Menu

An IVR (Interactive Voice Response) menu is an automated menu system that allows callers to interact with a computer-generated voice or touch-tone keypad inputs to navigate through the menu options.

An IVR menu can help to streamline call routing, reduce wait times, and provide callers with a more efficient and convenient way to interact with your business.

Voicemail

We can provide different divert options for your new VoIP number based on your preferences. A simple divert option will forward all incoming calls to a designated number, such as your mobile phone.

In addition, we can set up multiple diverts as part of an IVR Menu system that directs calls to different locations based on the choices made by the caller. This allows for easy call filtering and management.

Divert Options

Either as part of a IVR menu or to act as an individual feature, your VoiP number can be equipped with a dedicated voicemail inbox. Whether you are a small business or a large corporation, our smart technology can help streamline your communication process.

Diverts can be customised to include instructions for callers to leave a message or to listen to an automated message with important information.

Announcements

Our Al-powered technology is designed to create customised messages and announcements. This can be used to greet callers with a personalised welcome message, provide important information about your business, or give them instructions on how to navigate the phone system.

This not only enhances the overall caller experience but also frees up your staff's time and resources, allowing them to focus on other important tasks.

Helping your business run more efficiently.

Expand your customer communication lines.

Local phone numbers and freephone numbers are an essential part of any business's communication infrastructure.

In this digital age, businesses have multiple options when it comes to phone numbers, including local landlines and VoIP systems as well as a range of additional features to automate and enhance your business.

VolP Numbers

Using the internet to make and receive phone calls, this system is a modern and flexible option that operate in multiple locations or need to have remote workers.

Local Landlines

Even if your business operates remotely or across various locations, a local landline can be easily acquired to make you appear local to your target audience.

Advanced Features

The biggest benefit of having an internet phone system is the range of advanced features you can add. From automated messages and menus to dedicated voicemails.
